In Oscar Wilde's satirical and most acclaimed farce on Victorian values, a carefree young chap named Jack invents a false brother named "Ernest" as a pretext to occasionally travel from his country home to London, where he lives with his close friend and confidant, Algernon. Jack is madly in love with Gwendolen Fairfax, Algernon's cousin, and has managed to win Gwendolen's affection during his trips to London by going by the name Ernest as she has a strong desire to wed someone with the confident and impressive name of Ernest. Ernest in town, he returns to his country home as Jack, only to find that Algernon has also arrived under the identity of the non-existent brother Ernest and has fallen in love with Jack's ward, Cecily Cardew. Cecily, too, has long wished to marry a man by the name of Ernest. Confusion and hilarity ensue as the play reaches its climax as both men realize the 'Importance of Being Earnest'.
